BUILDING YOUR PRESTIGE IS OUR JOB

At Riggs, we know that the success of refractionists depends on their supplying patients with the finest vision of which their eyes are capable. We know that this demands exact interpretation of prescription requirements. That's why Riggs standards are rigid in the selection of skilled technicians. That's why our equipment is modern and critically precise, and that's why we use Bausch & Lomb products.

ISOPHRIN

TRADE MARK REG. CALIF.

A non-irritating Solution used as a nasal spray or drops

ISOPHRIN is 1/4% levo-meta-methylamino-ethanolphenol hydrochloride, $C_9H_{11}O_2N.HCl$ in a special isotonic solution prepared only by Broemmel's.

A synthetic substance of epinephrine-like action, but possesses the advantage that it is more stable, its effects are prolonged and it does not irritate the nasal mucosa or cause sneezing.

Prolonged contact with certain metals may cause discoloration, therefore use spray bottles with only glass or hard rubber fittings.

Supplied in original bottles of 1 oz.

FAITH-HOPE-CHARITY

Your patients have FAITH in you as a Doctor. You HOPE they will appreciate your service and will pay your bills promptly.

If you are convinced they are unable to pay, you render the service as CHARITY. But those who CAN pay and DON'T or WON'T—that's where Your Bureau can and will help. . . . The utmost of Safety and Satisfaction.

Surgical Pathology of the Diseases of the Mouth and Jaws. By Arthur E. Hertzler, M. D., Surgeon to the Agnes Hertzler Memorial Hospital, Halstead, Kansas, Professor of Surgery, University of Kansas. Cloth. Pp. 248, with 206 illustrations. Price, $5. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1938.

This last book of Hertzler's follows very much the same plan as many of the others in which he lists the pathogenesis, pathology and histology of many things which he has personally seen. It is an interesting catalogue covering most of the common lesions of the mouth and jaws which the average physician will encounter. As such, it is certainly worth reading.

On the other hand, it lacks what the reviewer feels to be an essential of any pathological treatise at this time, namely, an intimate association with clinical behavior and a similar association with x-ray therapy. Certainly, no work on pathology should close any subject in any of its parts without at least discussing the x-ray sensitivity of various and particular lesions.

Finally, one wonders concerning the difference between pathology and surgical pathology. If the subject of surgical pathology is so small that it needs to be segregated from the general field of study of disease, it is not worth ten volumes. If the subject of pathology is so large that specialized specialties should be developed within the subject, there are better classifications than this.—J. L. C.

Cancer Handbook of the Tumor Clinic, Stanford University School of Medicine. Edited by Eric Liljencrantz, M. D., Chief of Tumor Clinic, Stanford University School of Medicine; Consultant in Neoplastic Disease, United States Naval Hospital, Mare Island, and United States Marine Hospital, San Francisco. Cloth. Pp. 114. Price, $3.00. Stanford University: Stanford University Press, 1939.

This is a small volume of 100 pages, outlining in brief the treatment of cancer in the Tumor Clinic of Stanford University School of Medicine. Following a chapter on the cancer problem in general, and another on principles of radiation therapy, it then takes up the diagnosis and treatment of tumors in various locations in the body. Being originally assembled as a syllabus for postgraduate instruction it is especially brief and dogmatic in its statement of procedures to be followed, with some of which other clinics might be in disagreement. It is illustrated by photographs and diagrams.

This reviewer considers it a good practical volume for the purpose for which it was intended—an outline of procedures that can be followed, telling as well what can be expected from such procedures and, of course, is not a text on cancer. A bibliography is appended. O. H. P.

Trapping the Common Cold. By George Sanford Foster, M. D. Cloth. Pp. 125. Price, $1.25. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company, 1940.

A highly dogmatic and opinionated work. Statements, as of fact, are in no way confirmed; they are not even supported by generally-expressed views among the profession. An example of pseudoscience by a pseudoscientist.

BOOK REVIEWS

The author's development of his subject is mindful of the effort of one obsessed. He states that prevention of the common cold is as elementary and simple as anything in everyday life. Yet, as he unfolds it, it is seen to be a prescription for an arduous ritual for daily living. Every hour of the day and night is molded into his scheme of rigid discipline. He calls it a "systematic régime," a "painstaking life." A more fitting term would be futile drudgery. One is invited to trade the risk of an occasional cold for the status of slavery to its prevention.

Among the author's numerous obsessions is the omnipresence and omnipotence of atmospheric dust. Dust particles are said to be the great universal vehicles for transportation of cold germs. Even on a raft in mid-ocean he says the air would be "polluted" by particles of wood dust! Thus do cold germs forever "lurk" in our environment. Another choice brainstorm is his dissertation on the "soiled stomach." The stomach, says he, is so foul from fermentation of the evening meal that it must be washed before breakfast every morning! This makes the stomach "clean and sweet." The swallowed water, after polishing the stomach, is absorbed by the lymphatics, and "goes over the entire body, bathing and rinsing clean every corner of it!"

Shock: Blood Studies as a Guide to Therapy. By John Scudder, M. D., Med. Sc. D., F. A. C. S., from the Surgical Pathology Laboratory of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, and the Department of Surgery, the Presbyterian Hospital, New York City. Cloth. Pp. 315, with 55 illustrations, and five plates, three of which are in color. Price, $5.50. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1940.

The author presents a comprehensive survey of the historical and experimental evidence on shock with special emphasis on the importance of the hematocrit, specific gravity of the blood, plasma proteins, and blood potassium determination in the early recognition of shock and the guidance of its treatment. He gives in detail a number of representative cases following trauma, hemorrhage, operation, burns and perforated ulcer, with the details of and reasons for the treatment. In the treatment he describes the indications for transfusions, hypertonic saline injections, and the cortical extract.

Too often in the handling of shock hit or miss methods are used. This book should help us all to make our punches more scientific and telling in the fighting of this dreaded specter.

It is an outstanding monograph on shock which will be a welcome addition to the hospital library. A. J. H.

Proceedings of the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy, Washington, D. C., May 7 to 19, 1939. Volume II. Paper. Pp. 303. Price, 50 cents. Washington, D. C.: United States Government Printing Office, 1939.

This volume reports the discussion of present-day principles and practices on seven assigned topics by eminent military medical authorities. Also included in the volume is a symposium on the selection of flying personnel and the maintenance of their efficiency.

The discussions, and conclusions drawn therefrom, provide interesting reading even to nonmilitary physicians as is readily seen from the topic titles: Organization and functions of the medical service in colonial expeditions; Probable casualties in war; Practical anesthesia and analgesia in war surgery; Practical use of oxygen therapy with troops; Emergency treatment and apparatus for fractures of jaws in war; Effects of intermaxillary distance on hearing, ear noises and headaches. Manual of Graduate Training in Surgery: American College of Surgeons.

Pursuant to its aim of raising the standards of surgery, the American College of Surgeons has published a 24-page "Manual of Graduate Training in Surgery" in which are incorporated the requirements for its approval of programs of training in general surgery and the surgical specialties in hospitals of the United States and Canada.

The "Manual" is the outcome of ten years of study of educational programs in surgery by the Board of Regents and several committees of the College. The new "Manual" is an elaboration of the "Fundamental Principles and Criteria" and will in the future be applied in determining eligibility for the Approved List to be published in the Approval Number of the College Bulletin in October of each year.

The College recognizes three principal types of institutions as offering acceptable programs of graduate training in surgery: (1) universities or teaching hospitals supervised by departments of surgery of medical schools and graduate schools; (2) fellowships in recognized clinics and other organized groups; and (3) selected hospitals which by utilizing their own facilities to the fullest are able to carry acceptable programs through to completion, or which have supplemented their educational program, particularly in the basic medical sciences, through affiliation with medical schools and graduate schools.

The Minimum Standard for Graduate Training in Surgery which is included in the new "Manual" comprises five clauses, concerned with (1) duration and objective of the program; (2) organization and supervision; (3) basic medical sciences; (4) clinical material; and (5) organized study.

Under the requirements, an acceptable program requires a minimum of two and preferably three or more years of training in surgery, beyond at least one year of general internship. Such preparation is now necessary in order for an applicant for fellowship in the American College of Surgeons to meet the qualifications in respect to training, as set forth in the following resolution passed by the Board of Regents on May 10, 1936. The address of the American College of Surgeons is 40 East Erie Street, Chicago. Bowman C. Crowell and Malcolm T. MacEachern, Directors.

Surgical Technique and Principles of Operative Surgery. By A. V. Partipilo, M.D., F.A.C.S., Associate Professor and Director of the Division of Operative Surgery and Surgical Anatomy, Loyola University School of Medicine; Senior Attending Surgeon, St. Mary's Hospital; Attending Surgeon, Mercy Hospital. Foreword by Alton Ochsner, M.D., William Henderson, Professor and Director of the Department of Surgery, The Tulane University School of Medicine, New Orleans, Louisiana. Original illustrations by W. C. Shepard. Third Edition. Cloth. Pp. 567. Chicago: Chicago Postgraduate School of Surgery, 1938.

The author's aim of presenting a laboratory guide for the student and a practical reference book for the surgeon has been admirably accomplished. The preliminary chapters deal with suture materials, the methods of tying knots, the surgical anatomy of the abdominal wall and peritoneum, and abdominal incisions. Here, as throughout the text, the technical steps are minutely described and profusely illustrated by simple, though highly accurate drawings. Considerable space is devoted to hernias, surgery of the biliary system, and surgery of the gastro-intestinal tract, with brief chapters on the thyroid, the breast, the chest wall, skin grafting, and transfusions. Each operative description is preceded by a discussion of its indications and a review of the appropriate surgical anatomy and physiology. Every chapter is followed by a list of specific but comprehensive questions which cover the presented material. This publication may be readily recommended to the student as a practical guide to operative surgery, and to the surgeon as an excellent reference volume.

Injection Treatment of Hernia, Hydrocele, Ganglion, Hemorrhoids, Prostate Gland, Angioma, Varicocele, Varicose Veins, Bursae, and Joints. By Penn Riddle, B. S., M. D., F. A. C. S., Assistant Professor of Clinical and Operative Surgery, Baylor University, College of Medicine; Director of the Varicose Vein Clinic, Parkland Hospital, Dallas, Texas. Cloth. Pp. 290, with 153 illustrations. Price, $5.50. Philadelphia: W. B. Saunders Company, 1940.

The book is divided into four sections. The first three cover the treatment of hernia, varicose veins and hemorrhoids. The fourth includes the treatment of hydrocele, varicocele, bursae, ganglion, joints, angioma and the prostate gland.

The contents of each of the first three sections include chapters on history with an excellent chapter on the anatomy of the area involved. Then follow chapters on etiology, diagnosis, treatment and complications. The discussions in the fourth section are shorter but seem to cover the material adequately.

The author's attitude toward the treatment of hernia and the injection treatment of the prostate gland and the joints is conservative, in keeping with the uncertainty of the final estimate of these measures of therapy. The section on the treatment of hernia contains a splendid chapter on trusses.

The text is clear and the material is well organized. A large number of illustrations, both photographs and drawings, fully illustrate the material. The book should be valuable for class-room use as well as for those practicing physicians who are not thoroughly acquainted with this type of treatment.

Your Chest Should Be Flat. The Deep Chest Makes Better Soil for Tuberculosis. By S. A. Weisman, M. D., F. A. C. P., Assistant Professor of Medicine, University of Minnesota; Member of Consulting Staff in Tuberculosis, Glen Lake Sanatorium, Oak Terrace, Minnesota; Member of Staff, St. Andrew's and St. Mary's Hospital, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Cloth. Pp. 145, 17 tables and 74 illustrations in 49 figures. Price, $2.00. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1938.

The author deals principally with the relationship between the shape of the chest and the tendency to tuberculosis. He outlines the development of the normal and tuberculous chests. By means of the thoracic index, applied to several hundred normal and tuberculous individuals, he shows that the healthy chest is not round and deep, but flat and wide, and that the chest, which harbors the best soil for the growth of the tubercle bacillus, is not flat, but "sunken in" (deep and narrow), i. e., an undeveloped infantile one. An important measure, therefore, in the prevention of tuberculosis, should be the normal development of the chest, and the early correction of chest deformities. The author shows how this can be accomplished by healthy environment, proper diet, exercises for the development of chest musculature, correction of upper respiratory infections, and freedom from the communicable diseases of childhood. As the work of an experienced phy-

Scarlet Fever. By George F. Dick, M. D., D. Sc., Professor of Medicine, University of Chicago; Attending Physician, Billings Memorial Hospital; Editor, Department of Infectious Diseases, the Year Book of General Medicine, and Gladys Henry Dick, M. D., D. Sc. Cloth. Pp. 149. Price, $2.00. Chicago: The Year Book Publishers, Inc., 1938.

This book is a complete summary of our knowledge of the disease as it stands today. It reviews thoroughly the work done to prove a special strain of hemolytic streptococcus as the causative factor. The clinical aspects and complications are detailed. The production of a specific toxin and antitoxin are described.

In the control of the disease they stress the value of cultures, skin tests, active and passive immunization of contacts. They insist on a minimum quarantine period of four weeks, which is longer than that advocated by other workers.

For many years the authors have been staunch advocates for active immunization against the disease, but this has not found universal favor because of the number of injections required and the accompanying reactions. Brief mention is made of recent attempts to produce immunity by oral administration of the toxin. This is still in the experimental stage.

This short volume is favorably recommended to the general practitioner as well as the more serious student of the disease. A complete bibliography is appended. S. H.

One of the needs for the control of tuberculosis today is for greater emphasis on the extent of the disease and less on its declining death rate.—John L. Rice, M. D., New York City Department of Health.

"M" DAY: MEDICAL MOBILIZATION DAY

Action of the American Medical Association in New York.—In New York, at this year's annual session of the American Medical Association, on June 11, the House of Delegates of that national organization pledged the resources of the medical profession in full support of the military forces of the United States. So once again, within the brief span of one-quarter of a century, the making of preparations for a medical mobilization—a new "M" Day—will be experienced by more than one hundred thousand physicians. The offer of professional services, tendered on their behalf by the American Medical Association, will permit the Government to practically "enlist, distribute and regulate them (the medical profession) in time of war."

Important Rôle of the Medical Profession in Military Forces.—In the World War of 1914-1918 the medical profession rendered yeoman service of great value, and in the plans now under consideration by the Government the whole-hearted aid of physician-citizens is more than ever important. Indeed, it is no exaggeration to say that, in large measure, the efficiency of combat units depends upon the medical personnel of the army, navy and air forces; who, from the standpoint of preventive medicine, are called upon to keep the soldiers healthy and fit for service, through supervision of sanitation and food and other supplies, and also by the application of curative measures to conserve life, and to restore sick and injured soldiers and sailors for their duties as promptly as possible. Because of many factors, the procedures and methods so much in constant use in civil practice take on liberal modifications or radical changes, in order to make them adaptable and useful to military establishments.

Every Physician Should Be Alert in These Matters.—Since policies already approved by the constituted authorities of our country are bringing into being a military establishment different from any that has ever existed in the United States
